Please join us for a presentation and plant tour given by Ryan Crowley on the manufacturing and packaging processes required of the art of making craft beer. Ryan started at Two Roads as one of the first 20 employees. He managed the Tasting Room for just over a year before moving into his current role as Brand Ambassador. As BA, he handles company radio ads, podcasts, TV interviews, and big events along with giving all VIP tours. Ryan has given more than 350 tours of the brewery in the past 5 years.

Two Roads Brewing Company was founded in 2012 by four friends, Phil Markowski, Brad Hittle, Clement Pellani and Peter Doering who dreamed for years of starting a craft brewery. They foster a "road less traveled" philosophy in the beers they make and how they make them. Two Roads isn't just the logo on their brewery building, it's their philosophy. Life always seems to offer up two ways to go. It just so happens, Two Roads prefers the one less taken and having some fun along the way – in their lives, their careers and especially for their beers!

Phil Markowski, their award-winning brewmaster, is a 27-year craft beer veteran with an engineering background. After dabbling in home brewing and winning a few competitions in the 1980s, Phil made the right decision to go into the craft beer industry. A long career at various breweries has led to dozens of medals from the GABF and WBC, along with many other medals at regional and international competitions.

Brad Hittle's own road in life took a detour after getting a college degree. He immediately decided that working on an offshore drilling ship in Southeast Asia would be a better way to launch into life. He later got his MBA degree at Kellogg and then spent time at Johnson & Johnson and Unilever. Brad's career in beer included being the Chief Marketing Officer at the Pabst Brewing Company until 2010, where he led the success of brands like PBR, Lone Star and Primo, among others.

After starting his career working as an engineer in the F-18 radar lab at McDonnell Douglas, Clement Pellani quickly took a left turn to a more fulfilling career in making beer. In addition to having a brewing degree from the Siebel Institute of Technology, Clem's beer experience includes marketing at Labatt USA on the Rolling Rock and Labatt brands where he developed a line of craft beers. He also headed marketing and sales at New England Brewing Company, worked as a Marketing Director at E. & J. Gallo Winery, and was a consultant to Pabst Brewing Company on their new craft portfolio introductions.

The presentation and plant tour will cover:

- The Grains and Malt Mill Mechanics
- Brewing Process and Steam Jacked Heating Technology
- Solar/Fermentation and Different Styles of Beer
- Mechanics of the Brewery-Transferring Beer from Tank-to-Tank
- Bottling and Case Packaging Line Technology
